

IMEC (Marie Cobel) with "Friends"
August 2, 1986

Session 200: Divine indifference, true love

Summary: Individuals get involved in the emotional bodies of others through religions and through acts of believing that focusing on other people's responsibilities. They do not wish to focus on their own development. So, they focus on other people, other people accepting that then become imprisoned to them. This is where the true meaning of love and caring come in.

We run into difficulty with people thinking that we are saying or teaching for you to become apathetic towards the needs of your brothers and sisters, and this is not what we're saying. There is a fine line between helping and assisting someone in their weakness. But people must reach a certain level of understanding before they grasp the nonverbal healing. It is the nonverbal projections of knowingness that began to transfer between individuals when entities reach that level of understanding. Whatsoever you focus your attention on, there is where the support going of your consciousness. The aspects are entities, they exist on the Earth plane. They have been fed and nourished by the consciousness of man being focused in that area, rather than observing and transiting through this world, that you call physical matter. They now need the life force, which they can only get as it flows through mankind. Man has been trying to straighten out his brother, he has been trying to save the world, he has been trying to prove who God is, all of these things have existed. Wars, sickness, poverty, exist because man focuses his attention on them, to fix them. Individuals who use these manipulative powers of being weak, are sick, to imprison others within their bonds, when it no longer works, they will cease. They will grow by the very act of not having the mental support of others to indulge their weaknesses, their entrapment by the aspects.

Report by Daniel Erickson